2ND WORKSHOP OF THE WBMT

Salvador -Bahia, Brazil

3rd & 4th October 2013

FINAL PROGRAM

DEAR FRIENDS,

We warmly welcome you to the second Workshop of the Worldwide Network for Blood and Marrow Transplantation (WBMT) in cooperation with the World Health Organization (WHO) in Salvador, Brazil. This is a memorable occasion, which represents a big effort of many individuals and societies around the world to continue a series of events aiming at helping countries with restricted resources and transplantation activity. It is certainly unique that many societies active in the field of Haematopoietic stem cell transplantation (HSCT) around the world collaborate under the umbrella of the WBMT to offer their decades of experiences to improve and build up programs for a curative treatment for many haematological and non-haematological diseases. In line with the guiding principles of the WHO, we will discuss with delegates of Latin American countries, but also with delegates from North America, Asian Pacific, Europe and Africa important points on how to optimize or establish a stem cell transplantation program, on current indications for HSCT, donor selection, graft processing, developing an outcome database and the need for a global accreditation system. Since HSCT is a very costly procedure, it is essential to discuss these items under the aspects of restricted resources representing a challenge for presenter and audience.

The Workshop will be unique also from another standpoint. The guiding principles of the WHO declare regulation of transplantation on a national level as a governmental responsibility. One of the goals of this Workshop is to encourage the integration of HSCT within the Healthcare Policy of developing countries. This cannot be done without the active participation of politicians, national authorities and regulatory bodies who responded with enthusiasm and will participate actively during this event.

With this Workshop, the WBMT and the 21 member societies are making a further step towards excellence in stem cell transplantation around the world. The 2006 global survey published in JAMA, the first meeting in Hanoi, Vietnam and the global survey recently published in Haematologica as well as the foundation of the African Society for Blood and Marrow Transplantation (AFBMT) were the first steps towards this aim. Future projects include the creation of a global transplant center number and a donor outcome registry, just to mention a few. All these and many more activities are essential for the mission of the WBMT and will require efforts from all of us and the participation of many colleagues and experts around the world.

Let me express my admiration and gratefulness to all people involved in this Workshop starting with Prof. Luis Bouzas, Adriana Seber, German Espino and Marco Salvino and all the people of the Latin American Blood and Marrow Transplant (LABMT) group. My thanks also to all the WBMT Standing Committee Chairs, the Executive Organizing and Program Planning Committees, and especially to Marcelo Pasquini, who in many long lasting telephone conferences were able to create an outstanding program. Luc Noël and Jose R. Nuñez from the WHO were essential for promoting this event. I also appreciate administrative support provided by Paula Watry of the CIBMTR. Without the participation of the WMDA, EBMT, CIBMTR, APBMT, EMBMT and LABMT, this Workshop would not be possible. I am personally impressed by the enthusiasm and the willingness of many people to pursue in this effort and wish you all the best for this Workshop.

Sincerely

Dietger Niederwieser for the Executive Committee of the WBMT

Non-Government Organization (NGO) in official relations with the World Health Organization

DEAR PARTICIPANTS TO THE WBMT WORKSHOP,

Since 2004 when the World Health Organization (WHO) was requested by Members States for technical support on the transplantation of cells, tissues and organs and to promote international cooperation so as to increase the access of citizens to these therapeutic procedures, much progress has been achieved. The Worldwide Network for Blood and Marrow Transplantation (WBMT) led the process of developing harmonized practices in haematopoietic stem cell transplantation (HSCT) and is the leading voice among the stem cell transplantation community.

The vital cooperation of many scientists and physicians around the world has dramatically improved outcomes for patients who undergo HSCT and the WBMT, promoting excellence in stem cell transplantation, stem cell donation and cellular therapy, made it possible to achieve the 1 millionth transplants last December 2012.

These achievements and the way things have been done would be a model for development of the 2013 WHO Global Initiative for Medical Products of Human Origin (MPHO), with a strategy of three main components: compliance with WHO guiding principles, a globally consistent coding system, and vigilance and surveillance under the oversight of national competent authorities.

This Workshop in collaboration with WHO would show the importance of getting health authorities and professionals together, with experts and innovative thinkers coming from all fields, invited to elaborate on how to improve access to HSCT in a rational manner, taking advantage of the wealth of global experience and of the most recent progress. Global harmonization and consistency of practices to ensure the best possible results is not only mandated for HSCT but for all medical products of human origin and their clinical application. HSCT is a model in this respect with the global exchanges necessary to find matching donors. There is a responsibility for this Workshop to serve as a demonstration of the search for excellence that is essential for medical products of human origin and also as a demonstration of the search for efficacy in integration in the health system and universal health coverage.

Let me thank Professors Niederwieser and Kodera for their great effort to build this network, and for consolidating and reinforcing it every day, and also to thank all of those who have made this meeting possible. Also I would like to express my gratitude to Brazilian Government for its support and hospitality in hosting this Workshop and to the city of Salvador de Bahia for providing us with the perfect setting for this initiative that represents a commitment to society.

DISTINGUISHED DELEGATES AND GUESTS,

It is a great pleasure to welcome you all here to Salvador for the 2nd Global Workshop on Haematopoietic Stem Cells Transplantation in Emerging Countries.

We would like to genuinely thank the Worldwide Network for Blood & Marrow Transplantation (WBMT) and the World Health Organization (WHO) for mentoring this important and fascinating Workshop.

This Workshop aims to provide the opportunity to discuss the clinical, political and administrative needs to promote the development of stem cell transplantation activities in emerging areas and countries with limited resources. In Hanoi, it was shown that this is possible through the incentive and collaboration of all countries and organizations involved.

In addition to the stimulating intellectual and professional discussions and talks promoted by the experts, delegates will have the chance to experience Salvador, which was chosen to host this Workshop because of its strategic location, economic importance in the Northern areas of Brazil, and its need of a robust transplant program. Salvador is also close to the PanAmazonic and other Latin America countries, and shares with them many social and economic issues. We trust that the result of this Workshop will be very useful to all participants.

We are greatly honored and privileged to have you all here and wish you a successful Workshop and a pleasant stay in Salvador.
